

Table 5.1: Comparison of DROP and CDRI Indices of Resilience

Disaster Resilience of Place Index Susan Cutter, et al. (2010)	Community Disaster Resilience Index Walter Peacock, et al. (2010)
Social Resilience <hr/> education, age, transportation, language, special needs, and health coverage	Human Capital <hr/> education, language, special needs transportation, health care, comprehensive plan coverage, building codes and zoning coverage
Institutional Resilience <hr/> mitigation plan coverage, Citizen Corps and Storm Ready communities, first responder services	Physical Capital <hr/> construction establishments, insurance establishments, housing units, vacant housing, hospitals, fire stations, ambulances, community food service facilities, schools
Infrastructure Resilience <hr/> housing type, vacant rental units, schools, hotels/motels, hospital beds, housing age	Economic Capital <hr/> income per capita, median household income, employment, value of housing, business establishments, health insurance coverage
Economic Resilience <hr/> homeownership, employment, income inequality, female labor force, business size, healthcare access	Social Capital <hr/> registered voters, nonprofit groups, civic and religious organizations, recreational centers, business and professional associations
Community Capital <hr/> net migration, voter participation, religious adherents, civic and social advocacy organizations

Notes: Indicators used to measure each category are listed in italics. Not all indicators are reported. For a full list, see Cutter, et al. (2010), page 7, and Peacock, et al. (2010), pages 33–34.

Citation:

Ross, Ashley. Local Disaster Resilience: Administrative and Political Perspectives. New York: Routledge, 2014.